I Wonder

As I sit here thinking what to write next,
I see the birds flying to and fro from their nests,
And I wonder what it's like to fly so high,
To be swept with the wind so high in the sky.

As I sit here thinking, staring through the glass,
I don't see, but think what it's like in the grass,
And I wonder what it's like to crawl through the stalks,
To have so much space for your own little walks.

As I sit here thinking, taking my time,
I stare at the soil and think how it's fine,
And I wonder what it's like to dig so deep,
To live life so dark and have so much sleep.

As I sit here thinking how lucky we are,
I look outside and can see so, so far,
And I wonder what it's like to really be free,
To live free like the wind how life's meant to be.

The History of the Ancient World

From the Earliest Accounts to the Fall of Rome

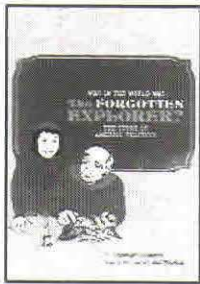

Susan Wise Bauer

This is the first volume in a bold new series that tells the stories of all peoples, connecting events from Europe to the Middle East to the far coast of China, while still giving weight to the characteristics of each country. Susan Wise Bauer provides both sweeping scope and vivid attention to the individual lives that give flesh to abstract assertions about human history.

Dozens of maps provide a clear geography of great events, while timelines give the reader an ongoing sense of the passage of years and cultural interconnection. This narrative history employs the methods of "history from beneath"—literature, epic traditions, private letters and accounts—to connect kings and leaders with the lives of those they ruled. The result is an engrossing tapestry of human behaviour from which we may draw conclusions about the direction of world events and the causes behind them.
